STAMPS

THE stamp collector who saved issues for future investment, and will put them away until the present war is over, will find that he was quite wise.

In the past twenty years postage stamps have been discovered to be a good investment. The present war, which flared over Europe put a stop to much collecting; and the destruction which resulted has already lost to the future many important issues. When the war is over, and the world finds peace once more, many of these stamps from 1914 to 1939 should be found to be of value.

Airmail stamps especially, commemoratives, too, will be found to be increasingly valuable.

Of course the stamp investor is now in the doldrums since the war has interfered with his pursuit. But he should lay aside the stamps he has acquired, for investment purposes, and even forget them. When peace dawns over the world again, and he digs up his array, he will discover many worthwhile items!

The writer of this page has invested in stamps in the past with good profits. So have others. The war means that we must forego our experiences for the time being. But do not destroy your special collections! Commemorative stamps, in many instances, are going to command good prices.

The illustration on this page is from France. It is a card mailed from the birthplace of the author of the French national anthem, Rouget de Lisle. The card shows the statue in his honor, mailed upon his centenary; and it was posted with a French stamp commemorating de Lisle, and showing the soldier as a part of this same statue. Such material is not common; the postmark marks the commemoration, and possessors of such items own a really interesting and somewhat valuable souvenir.

The stamp was issued in 1936; de Lisle's home town was Lons-le-Saunier, where the card was mailed that year on the occasion of the anniversary.

MINIMIDGET

THOSE TWO SUPER MIDGETS, RITTY AND MINIMIDGET, ARE ABOUT TO EMBARK ON ONE OF THEIR MOST AMAZING ADVENTURES-- FOLLOW THEM-- NOW.

by John F. Kolb

ON A HOT JULY DAY, THE MORNING OF THE 14th, THE GIRDERS SUPPORTING THE TRACKS OF AN ELEVATED TRAIN TAKE ON A RUSTY CORRODED LOOK.

THE TRAIN ROARS AROUND THE BEND, AS THE WEIGHT OF IT IS FELT ON THE GIRDERS THEY START TO CRUMBLE.

WITH A DULL THUNDEROUS NOISE THE TRESTLE COLLAPSES--THE TRAIN IS FLUNG ABOUT LIKE TEN PINS.

ONE OF THE CARS, WHEN IT HITS THE STREET, SHEARS OFF A FIRE PLUG AND WATER SHOOTS UP INTO THE AIR.

DOWN THE STREET MINIMIDGET AND RITTY WATCH—HORROR ETCHED ON THEIR FACES.

OH, IT'S AWFUL! LISTEN TO THE SCREAMING!

UNNOTICED BY THEM, A TORRENT OF WATER FROM THE SHEARED OFF HYDRANT IS BEARING DOWN ON THEM.

TOO LATE, MINIMIDGET SEES IT.

LOOK OUT RITTY!! RUN!!

THE WALL OF WATER IS ONLY TWO FEET HIGH—BUT TO THE SUPERMIDGETS IT IS A TIDAL WAVE AS IT SWEEPS OVER THEM.

HIS HOLD ON RITTY NEVER RELAXES AS THEY ARE SWEEPED DOWN A SEWER INTO THE LOWER LEVELS OF THE CITY.

COMING UP FOR AIR AND THEN BEING SWEEPED UNDER AGAIN, THEY ARE FINALLY CAST, HALF-DROWNED, INTO AN OLD UNUSED SUBWAY SYSTEM.

THANK HEAVEN'S WE'RE ALIVE!

BUT WE STILL HAVE TO FIND OUR WAY OUT OF HERE!

YES! -- AND THAT DOESN'T LOOK SO EASY!

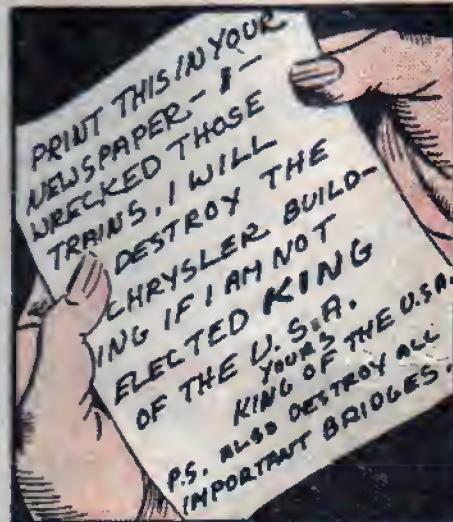

LATER

OH, MAYBE IT LEADS TO THE OUTSIDE!

LOOK! THERE'S A DOOR!

UP ON 42 ST. PEOPLE LOOK AROUND STARTLED, AS A RUMBLE FILLS THE AIR

THEN—WITH A THUNDEROUS ROAR THAT WAS HEARD UP IN YONKERS, THE BOTTOM OF THE CHRYSLER BUILDING GAVE WAY AND THE TOP CAME DOWN IN A CLOUD OF DUST.

MEANWHILE RITTY HAD RUN OVER TO THE CORNER WHERE MINIMIDGET LAY.

ARE YOU ALL RIGHT? SPEAK TO ME MINIMIDGET, PLEASE!

I'M--I'M ALL RIGHT. JUST STUNNED.

HELP ME OVER BEHIND THOSE BOXES SO HE WON'T FIND US.

HA-HA--THAT'S THE CHRYSLER BUILDING DESTROYED--I BETTER SEE ABOUT THAT SUPER-MIDGET!

I HIT HIM RIGHT INTO THIS CORNER. WHERE IS HE? OH, THERE'S A RAT HOLE. THE RAT MUST HAVE GOTTEN HIM!

YES, AND I'LL KILL EVERY BODY ELSE OFF LIKE RATS IF THEY DON'T MAKE ME KING. I'LL DISINTEGRATE EVERY BUILDING AND BRIDGE IN THE COUNTRY!!

MINIMIDGET WE HAVE TO STOP HIM!

I KNOW, BUT HOW? SAY HE'S MAKING COFFEE. I HAVE AN IDEA!

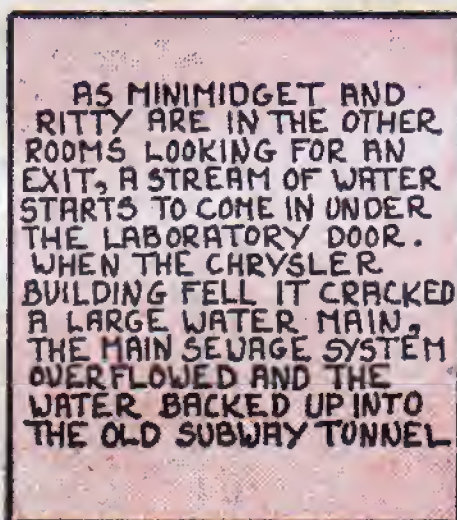

THERE'S SLEEPING TABLETS IN THIS BOTTLE. I'LL PUT AN OVER DOSE IN HIS COFFEE--WE CAN TIE HIM UP WHEN HE'S ASLEEP!

THREE IS ENOUGH, I'LL TIE THEM UP IN THIS CLOTH!

IN THE OTHER ROOM DEATH
HAS STOPPED THE EVIL WORK OF THE MAD WOULD BE KING.

LOOK! THERE'S A GRATING UP THERE.
IF THE WATER
CARRIES US UP THAT FAR, WE CAN GET OUT!

A RAT ALSO HAS THE
SAFETY OF THE TABLE TOP IN MIND.

HE CLIMBED UP ONTO IT
-- THEN HE SEES THE SUPERMIDGETS --

-- HIS BODY WENT TAUT.
HIS EYES FLASHING CRUEL-
LY HE SPRANG AT THEM.

BUT MINIMIDGET WASN'T CAUGHT NAPPING.

SO YOU WANT TO FIGHT?

I WAS GOING TO LET YOU STAY ON, ALIVE--

-- BUT-- IT'S TOO LATE NOW!

HERE'S THE GRATING, OVER
OUR HEADS.
CLIMB THROUGH.

FOR HOURS THEY WALKED
THROUGH DARK, DIM TUNNELS.

THEN.

LOOK!
SUNLIGHT!
IT MUST BE A WAY OUT!
WE'RE FREE!

Model for Death

Another
Amazing-Man
Adventure

By Duke Carey

As he sat with Zona Henderson on the terrace of the fashionable resort hotel, John Amen, known also as the AMAZING-MAN and "The Green Man," wondered why his beautiful assistant wasn't as happy as he was.

He had consented to take what was seemingly a week's rest at the mountain resort in order to locate a mountain headquarters of his arch enemy, The Great Quoniam, which he knew to be straggled somewhere close to the hotel.

Then it all came out. Zona angrily threw down the little daily gossip paper published by the hotel for its fashionable guests. "They're staging a style show in the auditorium this evening, with all the most beautiful girls among the guests modeling new fall costumes—and I haven't been invited to model one," she said. "I guess that makes me old Mother Hubbard, or somebody like that."

Amen had to smile to himself. Now wasn't that just like a girl? Here they were on the track of a gang of important criminals, and Zona worrying because she hadn't been invited to model in an amateur style show. "You're the prettiest girl in the hotel," he assured her.

"Evidently you're the only one who thinks it," she snickered, but just then a man in perfect garb stepped and bowed to her.

"I have an honor to invite you to wear the most beautiful costume in the show this evening, Miss Henderson," he said. "Your costume, it will be sent to your suite this evening."

A MAN managed to be in the sitting room of Zona's suite when a hotel bell boy brought up a huge cardboard box that afternoon. "Class!" he said admiringly after the bell boy had gone with the large tip Aman handed him.

Zona didn't answer. She was too busy taking the lid from the big box. Aman noted the name, "Cotisse, Paris," on the lid.

The costume was indeed beautiful. An evening gown done in exquisite metal cloth with a headdress to match. "It is beautiful," he admitted, examining carefully every detail of the gown and headdress.

"It's gorgeous," Zona said enthusiastically, "but you can't tell anything about it until you see it on me, silly." Her tone implied that even with Aman's international reputation he was after all only a mere man.

Aman didn't resent her tone. He was looking narrowly at a little metal disk inside and on the right side of the headdress. The disk seemed to be only a nameplate of the makers, but something about it caught his interest.

The hotel presented a lively scene that evening as Aman waited in the lobby for the summons to Zona's sitting room. He was to get the first look at her in the new costume.

The male guests were in full dress for the occasion and excited young beauties fluttered about, each bent on being the most successful model in the fashionable style show.

AT last the phone call came and Aman hurried up to Zona's suite, stood gasping at her young beauty as she pirouetted before him. A phone call interrupted Zona's rapture and she went to answer it.

"It's the manager of the show," she told Aman. "It's just about time for my entrance and he'll meet us in the lobby."

"Exquisite, magnifique, Mademoiselle!" the little man exclaimed when he saw Zona approaching from the elevator. "You will be ze most bee-ootiful femme in ze show! Now follow me zis way, please."

He walked on ahead toward a long corridor, and Aman's eyes narrowed to slits when he saw that the main area way leading toward the auditorium had been roped off. He knew that death was lurking somewhere ahead, but wasn't sure from whence it would come.

Then Aman saw ahead of them a large grill-work panel and everything began clicking together in his trained mind. That little metal disk in Zona's headdress, the grill work panel by which she must pass.

"Go back, go back!" he yelled at her. "Don't pass that panel!" Zona screamed, then fled back—long the way she had come.

The little show manager wheeled on Aman, his face a chalky mask of anger and disappointment, but Aman was tearing loose the iron grill-work. It came out with one mighty tug from Aman's amazingly strong hands, then the Amazing-Man leaped through and struck a vicious fist blow at the face of a man who held a bright chromium ray lap in his hand.

LEAVING the man unconscious, he leaped back into the corridor and sprang thirty feet down the corridor in a lightning-like soaring movement at the fleeing manager.

"Keep both these birds till I can question them about that mountain hangout they came from," he told two surprised hotel detectives who came panting up to the scene. "Just now I want to examine this ray lamp that was to be used on Miss Henderson."

"Here's the plot as they had it worked out," he told the hotel detectives and police an hour later. "The so-called style-show manager was really in the employ of The Great Question, an international criminal who wanted her killed in order to weaken me in my fight against him."

"They had placed a disk of sensitized metal on the right side of her headdress, while the ray lamp would be used from the left. That would throw the ray through her brain. It wouldn't have killed her instantly and no one would ever have been able to trace that murder to them."

"After looking at that lamp, I'm sure you're right, Mr. Aman," the astounded captain of police said, "but how did you ever figure it out?"

Aman smiled. "It was all a matter of a simple mistake in spelling," he admitted. "You see, the name on the box in which the costume came was spelled 'Cotisse,' but on the metal disk they had placed inside the headdress they had left out one 'S', and that set me to thinking."

"YOU'VE saved my life once more, John Aman," Zona said gratefully as they stood in the moonlight on the terrace after the excitement had died down. "You really have, and I'm grateful to you, but—" Her face clouded.

"But what?" Aman asked absently. His mind was busy on the problem of locating that criminal hangout in the mountains.

"But—" Zona hesitated, then came out with it. "But you'll never know how disappointed I am that I didn't get to model that beautiful costume."

"Girls!" Aman said in the tone that men and boys use about girls at times like that. "Girls and their ways—I'll never understand them."
